

Practical Example of Process Development

*"You barely have to do it correctly once, and it's already working."
Unknown project manager*

Practical example:

Carrying out a process benchmark between comparable production plants of a supplier in the automotive industry, and learning/process improvements resulting from this benchmark.

In a benchmark of production-related core processes (logistics, quality, procurement,...), these processes were systematically evaluated against one another in various plants. Process definitions and key figures were developed for this. On this basis, it was possible to learn from one another and with one another, leading to a significant improvement in the processes.
